

The basket strainer primarily consists of a nozzle, housing, filter basket, flange, flange cover, and fasteners. Installed in a pipeline, it removes larger solid impurities from the fluid. As the liquid flows through the strainer, contaminants are collected in the filter screen. When impurities reach a certain level, the housing cover can be opened for cleaning. This ensures the proper functioning of equipment and instruments, stabilizes the process, and enhances operational safety. The strainer is easy to use, simple to maintain, and highly efficient.
